Other info:

This model is quite flat – unusual for a Curvex:

Inside there are two trademarks of William B. Ogush, Inc. (WBO in the following), the well-known WBO logo and the lesser known “two diamonds” trademark of WBO:

I guess, the „two diamonds” brand was used to mark the case material – in this case, 14K gold.

A good abstract of WBO’s history was published in the „Cincinnati Enquirer“ of June 28, 1951:

There were two dial variants – the one shown with 12 numerals and a variation with markers and numerals (2-4-8-10-12):

Gruen Acquires Own Firm To Manufacture Watch Cases

The Gruen Watch Co., Cincinnati, yesterday announced the purchase of the firm of William B. Ogush, Inc., of New York City, largest manufacturer of platinum, gold and diamond watch cases in the nation. The price was not disclosed.

Benjamin S. Katz, President of Gruen, said the deal would permit expansion of his company's watch business.

William B. Ogush, President of the watch case firm bearing his name since 1935, will become Vice President of Gruen, with headquarters in New York City.

The Ogush company was organized in 1921 as Katz and Ogush, Inc., by Mr. Katz and Benjamin Ogush, brother of the present head of the concern. Mr. Katz left the company in 1935 to become President of Gruen and Katz and Ogush became Wm. B. Ogush, Inc.

The original Katz and Ogush company grew from a capitalization of less than $5,000 and within two years became the largest platinum jewelry manufacturers in America. It originally was housed in a brownstone residential property in New York.

In explaining the transaction, Mr. Katz said, "The Gruen Watch Co. for many years has given considerable attention to the designing and styling of watch cases, for it has been our conviction that such styling is as important as the movement itself. Watch cases very often cost from 10 to 100 times as much as the movements they hold.

"Because of our desire to expand our fine watch business, we decided to acquire a positive and reliable source. Until this transaction was completed, we had purchased our precious metal watch cases from four different manufacturers."

Mr. Katz announced that Gruen also acquired the services of Marce Ogush designer, and all of the other artisans of the company. The Ogush concern employes approximately 200 persons.
