For a 100 year old watch, my guess on the date wasn't too far off for a semi-novice. It does say on the inside dust cover "Verithin Model 14K" over the serial number. Below the serial number is an 'S'. Any idea if that's significant? I'm assuming the entire watch case is 14K gold since it's inscribed as such. It was a pleasant surprise to see the insides as clean as they were. No obvious pieces missing. I've had a couple of pocket watches here and there that were downright ugly once you pulled the back off. This one looked about as clean as it was leaving the shop. I also liked the pattern of the chain, too. What would this have retailed for back in the day? Thank you both for your assistance on this.
