I know haven't been on the site for a while. But I was contacted recently by a member and decided to visit the site again. Now I did buy a Gruen Precision Electronic last year thinking to get it restored. However I do not have the time or energy to expend on this. So I figured I would offer it up for sale to those who are better equipped & skilled.

I was thinking $20 total. The price includes shipping. Now these Precision Electronics are difficult to work with if you are unaware of rare information about repairing them. Fortunately I was given a excellent link last year by a member that provided this critical understanding on the Gruens.

Below I have posted the link to the informational site. And also another link to another thread here where the Precision Electronic is shown that I am offering for sale.

Don't give up there Amadeus! I enjoy your enthusiasm, and yes, the older electronic pieces are a fussy lot. They are nice when restored! I have a beautiful Bulova that I need to get redone as well. Can be a bit tricky!!! Hang in there brother!

A member showed interest in buying the watch. But if it doesn't sell here I may hang on to it a bit longer.
